According to the most moderate catimate the average quantity of cereals necessary for the consumption of each inhabitant is fourteen and nine-tenths bushels per annum, and it therefor results that all the States that come after Swedenupon the list have to obtain grain from other quantities. In this counter from other countries. In this countre three-fifths of the cereal production co-sists of maize. At one time the chief dependence of England for wheat was upon Russia and Prussia, and the supremacy of the United States in the grain markets of the world is of comparatively recent growth. Prior to 1800 Russia and Prussia led this country in the supply of wheat. From 1859 to 1851 the exports of wheat from this country to England aprang suddenly up from 430,504 cwts. to 15,510,472 cwts. while in the same period Russia advanced only from 3,837,454 cwts. to 4,567,483 cwts., and Prussia from 3,345,301 cwts. to 4425,573 cwts.

The lead taken so suddenly by this country has ever since been maintained. Tables covering the years from 1860 to 1872 show that the United States supplied England during that period with 285 per cent of her total imports of wheat, including flour, against 247 per cent from Russia and 17.2 per cant from Germany. At present Roumania and Southern Russia, to a lesser degree, are our principal competitors in the supply of maize.

of the years of high prices the home harvest was so good that the requirements of foreign breadstuffs was smaller than usual, yet the prices kept up. It should be stated, however, that in the four years, from 1804 to 1856, the harvesta in France were deficient, and instead of having wheat to export, as usual, it imported 6,946,166 quarters during that period, thus competing with England, instead of supplying it, as was usual.

The war between Primsis and Austria,in 1866, was so short that its effects upon trade and commerce was very transient. Probable Demand for American Probable Demand in the English market for the breadstuffs of this country has caused much inquiry for the statistics in regard to the supply and consumption of bread stuffs abroad, and the probable effect of the war upon the grain traffic. Dr. Edward Young, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department, has collected together some statistics bearing upon the subject, and it is upon information obtained from him that the following is based:
